These books were written at about the same time as the New Testament (currently referred to as the Christian Bible or the Holy Bible). This includes books such as Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers, Deuteronomy, and Joshua. Interspersed throughout these books, are two types of writings, the Torah – meaning the teachings, laws, and myths about the Jewish people and their religion. The Prophets – meaning the Jewish prophets who wrote during and after the time of Moses. The traditional Jewish Old Testament consists of just five books. But most Christians today believe that a sixth book should be added to the canon of Scriptures. This 6th book is called 1 and 2 Chronicles, and although it was accepted as Scripture by many Jews for a long time, it is not considered in the Jewish Tanakh, (the Hebrew equivalent of the OT). The OT is written in a complex language called the Holy Hebrew, which varies from modern Hebrew in
